Fully Equipped Combat Crossbow

This is an example of a completely tricked out combat crossbow. This bow was made for use at Estrella War XXII and it includes: a leather covered prod, polished titanium bolt clip, chrome plating on all metal parts (other than the prod & bolt clip), a clock and a laser site.

Bound In Prod

Standard means of attaching the prod to the stock. This will need to be retightened on occasion.

Bow Irons

Bow irons allow you to break your bow down for travel or storage.

PVC Bolt Clip

Bolt clips hold the bolt in the crossbow when you have the urgent need to quickly relocate on the battle field.

Titanium Bolt Clip

A fancier and more elegant version of the PVC bolt clip.

Leather Covered Prod

It is required in several of the Kingdoms on the West Coast of the United States that you cover the prod to prevent parts from leaving the bow in case of prod failure.

Hygrometer or Thermometer

Allows you to KNOW just how blooming hot and humid it is on the battlefield.

Clock or Compass

I like to keep from being lost in the woods and every one should keep track of how much time remains in the battle.

Bottle Opener

How else will you open that bottle of liquid refreshment after the battle?

Prod Booties

It is required in several of the Kingdoms on the West Coast of the United States that you cover the tips of the prod to prevent them from entering a face grill.

Shoulder Strap

During the long walk from camp up to the battle field, it can be a great blessing to be able to carry your crossbow slung over your back.

Rope Cocking Aid

This set of tackle helps those folks with more powerful bows to get them cocked with out undue stress.

Tubular Bow Case

Bows with bows irons can be disassembled and carried inside a tubular case for airline travel.

Fabric Bow Case

Bow cases prevent the bow from scratching up your car and picking up scratches itself.

Bow String

Extra bow strings can prevent you from missing a fight when your string gets too worn and breaks unexpectedly.

I don't really like to take custom orders. A lot of folks have "accidentally" let people down by not living up to the commitments that they make in so far as delivery of custom SCA Gear. I don't find this to be acceptable at all - Commitments MUST be honored! What I do is let people tell me what they want, and I will do what I can to get a bow together that fits their needs and/or wants in a reasonable amount of time (usually just a month or so, but chroming adds another month). When I get this new bow put together I will contact the person that was interested in it and let them know that it is available. If they still want it they get first crack at it. If they don't want it - then I will find someone else who wants it. But money will not change hands till I have a bow in hand to sell. This relieves me from a lot of stress and makes the bow making process a lot more fun. I typically have free time to churn out a large number of bows during the Christmas Season and during the summer (Mundanely, I am a College Professor). But then again - when the weather is nasty - I like to putter in the shop too!
